MOSCOW, February 7.

LAST friday night a fire broke out in the palace call'ed Le Fort, said to occasioned by the careleſſneſs of a prieſt in diſtilling. This fine palace, which the famous general Le Fort of Geneva built by order of the emperor Peter I for his own reſidence, had of late been occupied by the company of the empreſs's body guards, who rank as officers, and who lived there with their wives, children, and a great number of domeſticks, ſo that it is computed to have contained near 3000 perſons. It is impoſſible to expreſs the confuſion and diſtreſs occaſioned by this accident; many had no other means of ſaving themſelves but out of the windows with their children and effects, while others periſhed in endeavouring to make their eſcape on the ground floor. A few days before, the empreſs had ordered her gold and ſilver plate, and ſeveral cheſts of money to be carried thither. In removing theſe the bottoms of ſeveral fell out, which occaſioned ſome misfortunes, the guards driving back with their halberds and bayonets the populace, who, under the pretence of helping, wanted only to be fingering the money.

The body of merchants lately had an audience of the empreſs, when after thanking her majeſty for her indulgence to commerce, in the ſuppreſſion of the inland cuſtom-houſes, they preſented her on a gold ſaloon with a diamond of 56 carats valued at 53,000 rubles, which is more than 100,000 l. ſterling, beſides 100 000 ducats in three ſilver diſhes, and 50,000 rubles in ſpecie.

Letters from Peterſburgh acquaint us, that from a great variety of circumſtances they conclude, that a good underſtanding with the court of Stockholm is on the point of being reſtored; notwithſtanding which the admiralty have given orders for augmenting the fleet with ſeveral ſhips of the ſecond rate, which are

ROME, March 12.

THE reſult of the late frequent congregations of cardinals have been regularly communicated to the chevalier de St. George, but the public is ſtill kept unacquainted with them. It was with his approbation that cardinal Spinelli has been lately nominated protector of Scotland.

Leghorn, March 11. Wagers are laid here, that the iſland of Corſica is on the point of changing maſters: The malcontents, however, are continually contriving new ways to perpetuate the memory of their late aſſaſſinated chief Gaffario; they have even adorned their colours with his image, under which is this motto, "The remembrance of him will direct and animate us."

Genoa, March 12. Our ſpeculatiſts having lately given birth to a report, that Corſica is paſſing into other hands, and gone ſo far as to beſtow it on a prince who ſeems to have been overlooked by the public, the government has ſuppreſſed all converſation upon this ſubject, under very ſevere penalties.

Naples, March 9. Nothing is more wiſhed for by our merchants than the concluſion of the commercial treaty with Great Britain, as by virtue of that they will be at liberty to ſend their goods to England under Britiſh colours, which will ſecure them from the Barbary corſairs.

Paris, March 25. The Toulon ſquadron is not likely to be laid up, the command of it being given to count Galiſſoniere. It conſiſts of 12 men of war of the line, 8 bomb veſſels, and 6 fire ſhips, and has orders to be ready to ſail the firſt week in May.

Paris A-la-main, April 1. The following account has been received here of the revolt which happened lately in the Cevennes. The number of Proteſtants having for ſome paſt greatly increaſed, a reward of 600 livres was promiſed to any who would ſecure their miniſters; upon which an officer of the regiment of Normandy, who knew where to find one of them, went with a detachment of his men, and ſecured him; immediately after which he ſent to deſire the mayor of the place to furniſh him with a horſe to carry his priſoner to Montauban: This the mayor refuſed, ſaying he had none; but, upon the officer's reproaching him for diſobeying the king's order, he promiſed to comply; but, inſtead of that, he cauſed the alarum-bell to be rung, and all the peaſants inſtantly appear'd under arms. The officer of the regiment accordingly drew up his men, and, finding the number of the peaſants increaſe, he ſent for ſome troops in the neighbourhood, which, being arrived, form'd a body of 2000 men, and the mareſchal de Richelieu put himſelf at the head of them, having come there upon the firſt advice he received of the revolt. The peaſants were forced to retire to the mountains without firing a gun, and are kept in awe there. The mayor is likewiſe taken into cuſtody, and ſent with the miniſter, under a ſtrong guard to Montauban.

Paris, April 5. At the hotel of Monaco, at Verſailles, is to be ſeen an Automaton, repreſenting a man bigger than life, painted of a fleſh-colour, and ſtanding on a caſk: This figure is made to pronounce very diſtinctly, all the letters of the alphabet, the names of all the months, and a conſiderable number of other words; and likewiſe to pay a ſhort compliment to the ſpectators: It has been ſeen by all the court; and the moſt ingenious perſons ſeem moſt to admire it; yet all the inventor makes uſe of, to ſet this amazing machine a going, is only a pair of bellows, and a cylinder.

Kinſale, March 22. On monday the 11th inſtant arrived his majeſty's ſhip Kent, of 70 guns, Admiral Watſon, commander, from Plymouth, with the following fleet of men of war, to take on board land-forces for the Eaſt-Indies;
